Thanks Jim. But the notice does state: Media District BID Business Watch Meeting and I assume it is open to the public. Just want to be careful J

Thanks and good question.

The Television Center is very similar to the Musicians Union in that you enter an unlocked door from the street into a lobby and there is a desk staffed by a receptionist/not necessarily a security guard. Normally you are asked to "sign-in" before proceeding to the Conference Room just down a short hallway. Perhaps we could ask if the attendees could be exempt from signing-in?

Although, please be aware and to be noted . . . these Business Watch meetings are not "official" BID meetings as are Board or Committee meetings.

Hi Jim!

Because Riskin sued the Hollywood BID for having public meetings in "security" buildings (AMPAS) that require check-in (a violation of the Brown Act) I just wondered if Television City is open or if our meeting attendees have to check-in.

Thanks!

Laurie
